

At Least Two Die in Flaming Head-On Train Crash

POMQUET, N.S. (CP) — Rescue workers reached two bodies in the charred cab of a diesel locomotive Thursday night more than five hours after a fiery head-on collision between two CNR freight trains in this eastern Nova Scotia community.

The body of a third member of the engine crew of one train was still missing. Three men in the locomotive of the second train suffered minor injuries and burns. Their condition was described as satisfactory in hospital at Antigonish, 12 miles from here.

The CNR identified the victims as Albert MacIvor, the engineer; Laird Smith, brakeman; and Clarence Lowe, fireman, all of Stellarton, N.S.

Wrecking trains were on their way from Halifax and Sydney but the line was expected to be blocked until sometime today.

About 20 cars were derailed. Each train was pulled by two locomotives. The leading engines on each train caught fire shortly after the crash.

The victims were in the cab of the locomotive pulling an eastbound freight when it collided with a westbound train on a single-track section near the station here. The collision was followed by a blast when the fuel tanks of one of the locomotives exploded.

Blazing fuel oil, splattered

around the scene from the four diesels involved, kept firemen away from the wreckage for nearly five hours. For a time there was fear that a loaded wine car, which jumped onto the roof of one of the engines, would blow up.

Last-Minute 60-Day-Stay For Chessman

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Governor Edmund Brown today reprieved convict author Caryl Chessman for 60 days and turned the whole matter of capital punishment over to the state legislature.

The governor said he also was fearful of hostile demonstrations toward President Eisenhower on his forthcoming trip to South America.

ANOTHER CHANCE

Brown said he gave Chessman a reprieve because "I want to give the people of California an opportunity through the legislature, to express themselves on capital punishment."

He said he would put the matter on special call to the legislature when it reconvenes in March.

Chessman had been scheduled to die in the gas chamber at 10 a.m. today.

At San Quentin prison, the condemned man was led Thursday from his cell on death row, the one he has occupied 11½ years, to the "waiting cell" 13 steps from the gas chamber.

Before his reprieve, he had ordered what was supposed to have been his last meal—fried chicken and French fried potatoes.

HECTIC DAY

Warden Dickson visited the prisoner after a day of hectic developments in which one of Chessman's lawyers, Rosalie Asher of San Rafael, had personally delivered a letter from Chessman to the governor's office.

Warden Dickson was asked by reporters if he had spent more time than usual with Chessman on what was to have been his last night.

"Yes," the warden replied. "Guess I have. You see Chessman has been here so long, I've sort of got to know him."

The warden declined to say whether he was fond of the prisoner. He did say, however, "Chessman has some traits that must be admired."

Before the dramatic reversal this morning it had seemed certain that Chessman would die later today.

In Sacramento, Governor Edmund Brown said "No further action on my part is possible" after the state supreme court officials reported that the bill to abolish capital punishment for murder with 10 speakers for abolition and seven against.

First Stages Queen Resting Fitfully

LONDON (UPI) — The Queen was reported to be resting fitfully today in the first stages of an apparently difficult childbirth.

Her gynaecological surgeon, Dr. John Peel, who spent the night at Buckingham Palace, remained near at hand.

Court officials were reported to have been advised that the royal baby could be born at any moment.

When the birth appears imminent, apparently later today, the Queen's two other doctors and her anaesthetist will be summoned.

Soviet Power Growing Fast

LONDON (UPI) — The Soviet Union will have enough long-range missiles by 1962 to destroy 100 American targets at one time, Alastair Buchan, director of the British Institute for Strategic Studies, said Thursday.

OTTAWA (UPI) — The Commons last night wound up its first day's look at a bill to abolish capital punishment for murder with 10 speakers for abolition and seven against.

The House divided across party lines in a near-solem, non-partisan atmosphere. Speakers from all three parties voiced independent views on a bill by Frank McGee (PC, York-Scarborough) to abolish the death penalty for all but treason.

The debate was adjourned until next Thursday when another entire day will be set aside by all-party agreement for the controversial discussion. There was still doubt as to whether the bill would go to a vote or be "talked out," the usual fate of private member bills.

McGee, leading off the debate, challenged members to show that capital punishment provided an effective deterrent to murder.

"I've looked everywhere for a reasonable argument to support this idea and I can't find it," he said.

MAILED THREATS

At the end of the first day's debate, the 33-year-old McGee, who has received mailed threats to "get" him if the bill passes, drew support from eight other members. Seven served notice they will vote against his bill and another, Montreal Liberal Alan MacNaughton, said he favored abolition but gave no final opinion on the McGee measure.

There was no party pattern to the debate. McGee was

With G. E. Mortimore

There was little fuss in the newspapers when Her Majesty the Queen was born on April 21, 1926.

There were no advance stories in the paper speculating whether the future Royal child would wear a pink or blue bonnet. At least, on skimming through the files, I can't find any such stories.

The Daily Colonist ran only a brief front-page item on the birth itself, with a picture of the parents.

But Royal news of that day was more restrained than it is now.

They had no news by telegraph when the Queen's grandfather, King George V, was born on June 3, 1865.

This is the only reference to the event that I could find in the files in the month of June of that year:

Glancing through the Colonist files, I couldn't find any reference at all to the birth of Her Majesty's father on Dec. 14, 1856. The Colonist's London dispatch for that day began as follows:

"London, December 14—The great annual cattle show at the agricultural hall, Islington, has attracted more attention this week than affairs at Constantinople.

"Queen Victoria's wonderful helper, Fredericka, reared at Windsor, which swept all before it at other shows, won $4,000 in specie and cups at several shows this week.

'Stand Up and Show Me' Highway Patronage Case

Highways Minister Gagliardi boomed out a challenge to Opposition Leader Robert Strachan yesterday to "stand up in the House and show me where one highway contract has been let by the highways department on a patronage basis."

"Every contract I ever let was on the recommendation of my deputy minister and the highway engineer, and if they are letting contracts on a patronage basis I want to know about it."

"No contract has ever been given by this government on a patronage basis and I pray God there never will be," he said.

Women Cause Stamp Trouble

Mrs. Buda Brown (SC, Vancouver-Point Grey) in the legislature yesterday blamed the women of Canada and North America for the popularity of trading stamps.

"I represent many women's groups who are very much against such gimmicks and give-aways, yet we, the women, are the buyers," she said.

"I place the blame right where it belongs, on the women's shoulders. Some way or other we have forgotten true value like that which used to come from our old grocery stores."

"Those were the days when you bought just what you wanted and had it weighed with no frills, but of course they didn't have to pay out millions in competitive advertising on television, radio and newsprint," she said.

France Plans to Auction Infamous Penal Settlement

PARIS (Reuters) — The world's most notorious piece of real estate—Devil's Island—was put up for sale yesterday by the French government.

The 108-year-old penal settlement in French Guiana was listed for the finance ministry's next auction of government land.

Devil's Island, a tiny, palm-covered rock, was regarded almost as a rest home by the murderers and thieves who slaved and died in the malarial swamps of the mainland part of the penal settlement.

The island was reserved for political prisoners and thus gained a world-wide notoriety as the prison of Alfred Dreyfus, who was held there from 1894-99.

Dreyfus, a French Army captain falsely accused of espionage for the Germans, was declared innocent after one of France's most celebrated legal cases.

During its long, brutal history, the settlement received an estimated $2,000 of France's worst criminals who in the early days made the trip in iron cages chained to the deck of wooden convict ships.

Escape was the only hope for the convicts, but of the hundreds who tried it every year, only a third succeeded and most of these died in the jungle or shark-infested seas.

The most successful of the fugitives was Rene Belbeot, who made a break in a canoe in 1935 and after 11 months of desperate flight reached the United States.

His book on conditions at Devil's Island, Dry Guillotine, became a best-seller.

France sent its last convict ship to Devil's Island in 1938 and started closing the penal colony in the following year. The last prisoners were returned to France after the war.

Yesterday's announcement by the ministry said the prison buildings and grounds were for sale. The government is believed to be hoping that a business group would buy the settlement to open up industry.

TORONTO (CP)—A landlady was found guilty yesterday of theft after John Butler, 33, produced a color photograph in court showing a woman opening a drawer.

Mr. Butler told the court he became angry after a series of small thefts from his apartment and set a trap with a camera after losing a total of $300.

Fines for Strikes' Suggests Wicks

VANCOUVER (CP)—The possibility of controlling strikes by imposing government fines on management and labor has been suggested by British Columbia Labor Minister Lyle Wicks.

The fines would be imposed if the two parties failed to solve a dispute within a given time, he told the Vancouver Foremen's Club.

The minister said a proposal put forward by a United States professor of economics called for a 15-per-cent cut in wages and seizure of union dues and company profits on every day the parties failed to reach a settlement.

"I wonder if there is merit to considering this proposal?" Mr. Wicks asked.

He said remedial legislation is no answer to labor strife in B.C. and called for a higher degree of discussion between management and labor as the greatest possible deterrent to labor strife.

Victoria will be the home port of the latest addition to the Canadian coastal marine service fleet on the West Coast.

The rugged, 204-foot CGS Simon Fraser, now winding up her sea trials in Vancouver, was built for navigation in ice as a buoy and supply vessel, and has a helicopter platform aft for search and rescue work.

The vessel is scheduled to arrive in Victoria about the middle of next week after the department of transport takes delivery from Burrard Dry Dock Ltd. of North Vancouver.

VICTORIA-BASED FLEET
She joins another newcomer to the local waterfront scene, the icebreaker CGS Camsell, which recently completed her first operational voyage as a buoy and supply ship.

Other vessels in the government fleet based here are the supply vessels Estevan and Sir James Douglas and the weatherships St. Catharines, Stonetown and St. Stephen.

ALBERNI RETIRES

Col. Keith Dixon, district marine agent here, said arrival of the new ship will be followed within a few months by the retirement of the veteran supply vessel CGS Alberni now based at Prince Rupert.

The new $3,000,000 Simon Fraser was designed to suit icebreaking duties in the course of supplying outposts inside the Arctic Circle.

The Canadian coastal marine service consists of all government ships including naval vessels and is designed to perform services of a coast guard.

SAFETY NOTE

Cost of care of tuberculosis patients in all Canadian hospitals amounted to about $40,000 in 1958.

The new regulations go into effect next June 1.

A department spokesman said that in the past samples have included such things as bars of soap, toothpaste tubes and even slabs of wallboard.

Under the new regulations, household mail must be folded to a size no longer than 4½ by 12 inches. This will rid mail carriers of bulky "flyers" and broadsheets too large to slip through letter slots.

Post Office Bans Samples in Mail

Ottawa (CP)—The post office department is shedding the job of mass distribution of soap, toothpaste and other advertising samples to Canadian households.

Postmaster-General William Hamilton, announcing the decision yesterday, also clamped on a size limit for unaddressed "householder" advertising mail and boosted charges on overweight items of this type of mail.

Marriage Hoax Costs 'Scoundrel' $25,000

VANCOUVER (CP)—A 55-year-old woman who found she was not married to the man with whom she had lived for 31 years was yesterday awarded damages totalling $25,000.

Miss Irma Kiss was awarded the damages in British Columbia Supreme Court against John Pustay, 65, a carpenter.

Chessman's Defender

Sentence Ironic Attorney Says

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Rosalie Sue Asher, the lawyer who has defended Caryl Chessman longer than anyone else, commented yesterday upon the irony of his expected execution.

"Look at him," Miss Asher said, "he used to be nothing but a typical young hoodlum. Aside from his family and a few friends, the only people who knew him were police and probation officers."

"But now," she continued, "he's known all over the world. People think he's brilliant, he's an author, he's everything he ever wanted to be."

"He'd never commit another crime," she said. "Why should he? He's Caryl Chessman and now that means something."

"So now they decide to kill him. Does it make any sense?" she asked.

Miss Asher became Chessman's attorney in 1948, shortly after his conviction for kidnap and rape in Los Angeles and his removal to San Quentin's death row.

She is, she said, responsible for much of Chessman's legal knowledge, which is considerable. During the early years before his case attracted world-wide notice, she brought him legal textbooks for study and suggested others that he should order from the prison library.

Yesterday she was making arrangements for his funeral. She had been refused permission to see the governor last night.

Chessman Execution Stirs World Storm

LONDON (UPI) — The approaching execution of condemned rapist Caryl Chessman has whipped up a storm of controversy ranging from Vatican City to Communist East Germany yesterday.

Aside from those opposed to capital punishment in principle, the gist of the objections was that Chessman had suffered enough for his crime by living in the shadow of the death chair for 11½ years.

The Vatican City newspaper Osservatore Romano did not specifically recommend mercy for Chessman but said California officials would have to answer "only to God" for their final decision.

It suggested, however, that Chessman's long term on death row had become "no longer a judicial question" but "a human question."

The Communist East German newspaper, at the other end of the political spectrum, sought to make political capital out of the impending execution by suggesting that Chessman apply for a job with the West German government if he ever gets out of prison.

"Murderers are treasured there," it said.

In London, six of the nine newspapers devoted more space to Chessman than they did to the impending birth of Queen Elizabeth's baby.

The London Daily Herald said editorially that if Chessman were executed "it will be a day when it will be rather unusual to be an American."

In Milan, the Rev. Michele Blandino, a Roman Catholic priest who has helped war criminals and deported American gangsters, said he asked President Eisenhower to stay the execution.

Italian Social Democratic party leader Giuseppe Saragat cabled Gov. Edmund G. Brown of California to spare Chessman's life.

In Lisbon, the newspaper Republique said editorially that the Chessman case had cast strong doubts on the validity of capital punishment.

In Scandinavia, student groups pledged support to a "spare Chessman" campaign.

French singer George Vienet left Paris for California to plead personally with Gov. Brown to spare Chessman's life.

covered rock, was regarded almost as a rest home by the murderers and thieves who slaved and died in the malarial swamps of the mainland part of the penal settlement,

The island was reserved for political prisoners and thus gained a world-wide notoriety as the prison of Alfred Dreyfus, who was held there from 1894-99.

Dreyfus, a French Army captain falsely accused of espionage for the Germans, was declared innocent after one of France's most celebrated legal cases.

During its long, brutal history, the settlement received an estimated $2,000 of France's worst criminals who in the early days made the trip in iron cages chained to the deck of wooden convict ships.

Escape was the only hope for the convicts, but of the hundreds who tried it every year, only a third succeeded and most of these died in the jungle or shark-infested seas.

The most successful of the fugitives was Rene Belbeot, who made a break in a canoe in 1935 and after 11 months of desperate flight reached the United States.

His book on conditions at Devil's Island, Dry Guillotine, became a best-seller.

France sent its last convict ship to Devil's Island in 1938 and started closing the penal colony in the following year. The last prisoners were returned to France after the war.

Evenhanded Justice

IN every democracy worthy of the name, the administration of justice is kept apart from the feelings, emotions and at times the temper of the people. It would be an intolerable state of affairs if popularity ratings, misplaced or maudlin sympathy, or even the whims of any section of society were allowed to influence the calm, unbiased process whereby the truth is sifted by due trial process, with all its checks and balances by way of appeal. Similarly, where a conviction has been returned and the balance rests finally against the culprit by no stretch of imagination should public clamor have a part in the withholding or carrying out of sentence, even to the death penalty itself.

It is on the firm rock of untrammeled review of all of the circumstances, before competent tribunals and under the written laws of the land, that the administration of justice must continue to rest. Were that otherwise, one of the most vital of all human freedoms would be nullified, the freedom of the individual to walk, to live and to be without fear.

While at the moment it is an American example which is engaging some attention, public outcry to restrain, affect or alter the ends of justice can only be deplored. On its emotional side the public is seldom in a position to know, let alone judge, all that went into any trial from its start to its finish. A clamor to set aside sentence as often as not would, if allowed to take precedence over the findings of the law in proper form, bring irreparable injustice to those wronged in the commission of the crime itself.

Two pictures side by side in the Colonist yesterday needed no words to convey their message. One was of a convicted felon who had spent 11 years in death-cell by taking advantage of loopholes in the system of jurisprudence which had found him guilty beyond the shadow of doubt. The other was a picture of a young girl who had spent 11 years in a mental home, as his victim in one of the most dastardly crimes it would be possible to imagine.

It is another matter that any individual in a democratic land can spend more than a decade under sentence of death after full and final trial. That has to do with the effectiveness of jurisprudence itself. Happily that would not be possible in Canada. Our care must be to see that it never becomes so and, even more vitally, that mawkishness never under any circumstances imposes or permits punishment by upsetting the balance which the courts are on oath to hold in a just and impartial manner under the laws of the land.

Everyone Pays Taxes

A BILL to increase the homeowners' grant to $50 from the original $28 and to widen eligibility slightly is now before the B.C. Legislature, but Premier Bennett should not feel hurt if people fail to show much gratitude for it. To begin with, they are intelligent enough to recognize this as some of their own money coming back to them—not a gift but a partial repayment of taxes in excess of governmental requirements.

Then again there is a bad flaw in the basis of this grant. Since it amounts to a redistribution of money obtained through taxes from all the people of the province, all the people should share it, and not just one category. It is given to homeowners to help them with rising local taxes. The formula is faulty, however, because it rests on the fallacy that only those who live in their own homes have to pay property taxes.

This is nonsense. The only difference between a homeowner and tenant is that the one pays taxes directly to his municipality, the other indirectly through rent. Landlords in computing rent to charge include taxes in the expenses and pass them along to the tenant. In some instances the landlord may also take a profit on the taxes; for example, if the rate on the house goes up by, say, $10 he may raise the rent by a dollar a month. Occupants of apartment buildings are in the same position—and in the cities their numbers are increasing rapidly.

To suggest that tenants are not taxpayers is tantamount to saying that the purchaser of a taxable article does not pay federal or provincial sales tax because he gives the money to the retailer instead of paying it directly to the government.

Valuable Liaison

BECAUSE of the unusual number of housebreaking cases in recent weeks the police chiefs of Greater Victoria have combined to warn householders against careless habits. They advise against leaving money or valuables around, although admittedly people can hardly take everything of this nature with them when they go out. They bespeak also the alertness of neighbors in noting strangers loitering around, and invite community co-operation in the prevention of burglary.

One aspect of community awareness is that the more publicity given to such instances the more alert householders become. It is here that the press can be of assistance to the police, and by and large the liaison between them is excellent. On occasion however there seems to be a tendency on the part of some police officials to be over-cautious. Undoubtedly there are times when it is expedient to be close-mouthed in order to further the prevention or detection of crime, but mostly the more publicity the better.

When for instance announcements are delayed of burglaries which obviously are no secret in the neighborhoods concerned, the police might suffer in public estimation. This could give rise to doubts about their efficiency, since it may be asked why the need for grudging disclosure. One likes to think that the police forces of this area do their work well. They lack sufficient personnel to cope with all the duties imposed on them, but they pursue their job determinedly in spite of difficulties. When they find it possible to enlist the press to their aid without hindrance, however, the concerted efforts redound to the benefit of the community.

Interpreting the News

Main Line Unchanged

By WILLIAM L. RYAN
Associated Press Correspondent

NEW YORK (AP) — Nikita Khrushchev's activities make it seem more and more likely that he has little faith in any real accomplishment at the summit in Paris three months from now, and that he is manoeuvring to reap benefit from the failure.

Khrushchev is carrying out a sustained political-psychological offensive on a number of fronts.

His recent statement on the possibility of a nuclear test ban agreement, for example, seems logical enough to the average reader until it is stripped to its essentials and found to be a repetition of the same old propaganda.

His stage direction of the meeting of Communist satellite leaders at the Warsaw pact meeting, too, resulted in a statement full of ringing words about hopes for world peace, but it advanced the cause of world peace not an inch.

Khrushchev approaches the summit with the idea, apparently, of wringing all the benefit possible out of his proposal for total world disarmament. This is a thoroughly unrealistic proposal, as Khrushchev undoubtedly intended it to be. But in a world hungering for peace, it undeniably has psychological impact.

The Soviet leader expects to get nowhere, so far as agreement on such a proposal is concerned. Indeed, the chances are that he would be dismayed if there were any chance of it getting somewhere.

His statement on nuclear testing ignores the West's position that the basis he proposes for negotiations already have been outdated. If nuclear testing begins again, Khrushchev wants the west to get all the blame.

Khrushchev's major attention, however, seems centred on Germany and Berlin. He asks the world to believe only one conclusion is possible from West German Chancellor Adenauer's refusal to recognize Communist East Germany: that West German militarists will risk war to win back German territories lost in the Second World War.

The object seems to be to bring as much psychological pressure against the West German government as possible in advance of the summit. The process is one of softening up the opposition for the main bout.

Thinking Aloud

Crisis in Leadership

"... of shoes—and ships—and sealing wax—of cabbages and kings."

By TOM TAYLOR

THE Commonwealth is an assembly like the world has never seen before. It is a mixture of religions, races and creeds.

The ways of its members are devious and separate. Their concepts and behaviour differ markedly.

India, for instance, frowns more often on its western partners than it does on their chief tormentor, Soviet Russia.

One member, South Africa, is currently in hot water. Ever since Prime Minister Macmillan rebuked it for its apartheid policy others have jumped on the bandwagon.

An Ottawa correspondent indicts the Diefenbaker regime for not similarly condemning South Africa. An English MP says the latter country should be kicked out of the Commonwealth.

* * *

It is easy for the other white Commonwealth nations to talk. Their own repressions have prevented the racial problems that beset South Africa.

Apartheid cannot be defended, but the troubles of South Africa are not simple. They are not akin to those of the African colonies claiming self-government; countries where a handful of whites rule overwhelming numbers of blacks.

South Africa is not a colony but an independent nation. It contains varying racial strains. A quarter of its people are white, the largest grouping of these being the Boers, or Afrikaans. There are about 8,000,000 Bantus, 250,000 Asiatics, 1,000,000 of colored (mixed) blood.

The complexities of life in that country are therefore obvious.

The Afrikaans hold the governing reins and they have a racial complex; they think divine ordination separated whites from blacks and they want to keep it that way.

This is against the temper and climate of modern trends, and in the end they will lose out. Nothing is more certain.

But they are not Johnnies-Come-Lately. They have been in South Africa for 200 years and more, as long as white men have been in Canada. They consider themselves South Africans, not intruders.

The only real difference between them and us is that, happily for us, the natives of this land were far fewer than those of South Africa. If the reverse had been the case our critics might have been singing a different tune.

In passing, do we treat our Indians as equals in every respect? Numbers do not put principles at naught.

* * *

The English MP who wants South Africa expelled says "we cannot build and maintain a multi-racial Commonwealth while one member pursues the policy of apartheid."

An excellent sentiment, but the other white members of the Commonwealth, except perhaps Britain, pursue an apartheid of their own. Only they call it immigration.

Because people live in glass houses that is not to say justice should be denied by a closed mouth. But since we may be attained too there is some call for restraint and understanding of South African difficulties.

The racial problem is probably the greatest problem of the present day. There is no room for sanctimony about kicking South Africa out of the Commonwealth, however, unless the other white member nations are prepared to share and share alike with their non-white partners.

Is Canada for one prepared to do that; not the government but Canadians as a whole?

Small Nations Look to Canada

By PETER COUROPOULOS, from United Nations

HARD from here, the recent attacks in Washington against the Eisenhower administration, concerning the adequacy of U.S. defence allocations, seemed to take place outside the present world situation.

The discussions on U.S. military preparedness were carried on as if the question of peace or war hinged exclusively on the balance of strength between America and Russia.

Actually, however important that balance of terror might be, the world situation is much more complex. Smaller nations play a role that cannot be disregarded in evaluating international events.

To the former colonial nations the U.S.-U.S.S.R. squabbles may be as irrelevant as their own problems are still to us. These countries undergo a social awakening the strength of which escapes our range of interests to a great extent.

To get a glimpse of what is going on in the under-developed nations, a look into a non-political report prepared by the UN Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization could be helpful.

Under such a title as "Access of Girls and Women to Education Outside School" one may read about the "war against ignorance" that goes on there and which has absolutely no connection with the current interests of the civilized countries in the arms race.

In the Afro-Asian countries, where illiteracy is plight of the population's majority, there are "literacy campaigns" going on at a grand scale.

Psychological Twaddle

Horrors of Suburbia

(From The Toronto Star)

POOR suburbia! A committee of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, making a nation-wide study of suburban growth, finds it dull and monotonous.

To judge by their comments, the architects appear to be falling for the amateur psychological twaddle of some social scientists: about the frustrations, unconscious drives and sublimated instincts that are supposed to make the suburbite a rather odd person more to be pitied than scorned.

So suburbia is "keeping up with the Joneses." This supposedly is a reason for what the architects call its monotony of row on row of similar houses, each with its bit of lawn, its laneway and TV aerial.

It's "public opinion" that forces the average man to live in a private one-family suburban unit. You know:

* * *

This type of gibberish analysis, though more sophisticated in style, made Vance Packard's The Status Seekers

a smash seller. Such involved probing of hidden motives may be an amusing parlor game, but it usually overlooks the normal reasons for human behavior.

Yes, suburbanites have lawns, though they didn't invent them. Like most Canadians anywhere, they like fresh green grass.

Why the laneways? Simple, they have cars.

Why TV aerials? Everyone likes television, as any architect could discover by looking at city skylines.

As for public opinion herding people into suburban one-unit homes: nonsense. The popular instinct to acquire one's own house is much older than suburbia, as old as the saying that "An Englishman's home is his castle." Where else can most people afford a house but in the suburbs?

One reason for those similar houses which are so deplored, though, should certainly occur to any architect: few suburbanites are rich enough to afford an architect to build them individually-styled homes.

Clean--But Deadly Dull

(From The Winnipeg Free Press)

A HEARTY bravo for the Ontario high school which has chucked out of its library a book on Henry VIII (approved by the provincial department of education) on the grounds, according to a trustee, that it was probably historically inaccurate but morally questionable.

Having got rid of Little Black Sambo and censored Polly Doodle on grounds of racial discrimination, our schools can, following the Ontario institution's example, now get to work to clean up their libraries and protect the tender-minds of our adolescents from all corrupting influences.

What should be thrown out next? Certainly the Bible, which has scattered through its pages a large number of highly immoral characters, some of whom did things that even Bluff King Hal would have balked at. History books, because much history has been made by people who were no better morally—some of them a good deal worse—than Henry. The works of Chaucer, Shakespeare, Dickens, in fact almost every great work of literature.

"But think of the sunsets!" I countered. "Imagine the sunsets they have on the Bay of Fundy. And the Laurentians! I have seen sunsets on the prairies that I just couldn't believe, when they got those big, bright, thunderheads towering in the heavens, and vast flames of orange red, and topaz...

"The trouble is," cut in the engineer, "by the time we get planes that can pace the sun, we'll be travelling at five and six miles up and see nothing but glassy emptiness."

The Packsack

By GREGORY CLARK

ACCORDING to an aircraft designer with whom I shared a seat in a trans-Canada plane, the time is not far distant when we will be able to board a plane at Halifax just as dawn is breaking, and then travel with the dawn all the way across to Vancouver.

"Even better," I said, "we can get aboard just at sunset, in Halifax, and ride in the sunset all the way to the Pacific."

"Except," said the engineer, "that you'd have the sun in your eyes all the way. Me, I am a daybreak man. I love to see the dawn spreading over the earth. To have several hours of dawn, all across the Maritimes, over Quebec, across the Great Lakes, seeing the prairies, in June, with the first light of day just palling them. And then the Rockies, all mysterious shadow and eerie depths, and the first rays tipping the peaks..."

"But think of the sunsets!" I countered. "Imagine the sunsets they have on the Bay of Fundy. And the Laurentians! I have seen sunsets on the prairies that I just couldn't believe, when they got those big, bright, thunderheads towering in the heavens, and vast flames of orange red, and topaz..."

"The trouble is," cut in the engineer, "by the time we get planes that can pace the sun, we'll be travelling at five and six miles up and see nothing but glassy emptiness."

Letters to the Editor

Puny Effort

Our country simply is not doing what it should in this special World Refugee Year to help solve the problems of refugee peoples.

In my opinion local and provincial governments also should share in the burden of refugee relief. It has undoubtedly been a great disappointment to a large number of people in this province that our provincial government has refused to accept any share of the effort that is being made.

None of the 100 refugee families Canada has taken in has come to B.C. This is because our government has refused to share the burden of looking after them. We are rightly critical, it seems to me, of the small effort our national government is making. We should be all the more so of our provincial government, refusing as it does to share even in this small effort.

There is still time. Let us hope that governments and voluntary organizations will do more.

GORDON SELMAN,

The Red Ensign

The Red Ensign by reason of history has a renown comparable to that of older nations, and it would be inconsistent with principle to change or discard its symbol. The length of time it has flown from the masthead is proof of its validity. The ensign with the maple leaf has a reputation to be honored for its fame abroad and to be proudly regarded by its principal standard bearers, the veterans of several campaigns and the services they represent.

If it is desired to be more definite, each province and territory could have its own adopted coat of arms, emblazoned in the flag for displaying within its borders. This would signify and correspond to equal status for all and a fair share of distinction as Canadian subjects.

Neither the Union Jack nor the tricolor or fleur-de-lis would be ignored, suffer in dignity or lose traditional respect for all that.

J. RASMUSSEN.

Money Wasted

On the subject of waste of money, it would be interesting to know how much the concrete and blacktop shuffle board in Beacon Hill Park—which employed several workers for several weeks last year—cost, and which apparently has never been used at all, except perhaps by the seagulls.

Root Out Imperialism Khrushchev Advises

JAKARTA, Indonesia (Reuters) — Premier Khrushchev and 100 banquet guests: "Your excellency is a world figure very well known by the Indonesian people, a world leader who works very hard for world peace, a world leader who is consistent in opposing imperialism and colonialism."

At the same time, he urged Indonesians to root out any remains of imperialism in this neutralist country of 90,000,000, freed from Dutch rule 11 years ago.

Khrushchev spoke at a sumptuous banquet given by President Sukarno after arriving from Burma for a 12-day visit to the republic's sprawling islands. A cheering orderly crowd of 20,000 greeted him at the airport and 20,000 more were waiting at Sukarno's palace.

Sukarno told Khrushchev and 100 banquet guests: "Your excellency is a world figure very well known by the Indonesian people, a world leader who works very hard for world peace, a world leader who is consistent in opposing imperialism and colonialism."

"And imperialism and colonialism we in Indonesia also oppose."

Khrushchev declared: "We are prepared to help Indonesia continually as we

Highest Bidder Gets Legally Snarled Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — The weary-looking Georgios A., the freighter held firmly to a legal hawser, lies at her berth here awaiting sale March 1 to the highest bidder.

The 10,000-ton freighter, once a liberty ship, has been caught in a legal entanglement described by marine lawyers as the most confused they have seen.

On the hardwood paneling in the captain's cabin is the story of her troubles, written in 22 installments. That's the number of writs obtained against the ship by creditors who claim nearly $500,000 in unpaid bills and damages.

Halifax County Sheriff Stanley Bauld will conduct the auction, "just like any other auction with the article going to the highest bidder." In this case the article is $3,500,000 worth of ship, expected to sell for less than one-fourth that figure.

Sheriff Bauld said he had received several inquiries about the sale, including calls from Boston and Montreal.

It was learned that Montreal interests were keen to buy the ship, under arrest since she ran aground in Sydney harbor in November.

The first writ tacked to the cabin's wall was for non-payment of port charges at Sydney. From then until early this month sheriff's deputies in Sydney and here beat a path to the vessel with writs.

do with other countries which we consider as our brothers."

He said Indonesia can overcome its problems if it organizes itself and gets rid of any imperialist remnants.

As Khrushchev arrived, a one-year extension of the Russian-Indonesian trade agreement was announced. Under an agreement signed in August, 1956, Russia sells machinery, chemicals and equipment to Indonesia and buys rubber, copra, coffee and tea.

Mr. Ross has visited Australia, the islands of Fiji and Samoa, Thailand, Indonesia, Singapore and Malaya in connection with her work. Color slides will be shown at the meeting.

In Edmonton

48 Eggs For $1

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Housewives in Edmonton, by a bit of adroit shopping, could find grade A large eggs selling four dozen for $1 this week.

If they really looked around, they found that one supermarket was selling them at two dozen for 35 cents.

This extreme case points up what has happened to the egg market all across the country since federal government deficiency payments went into force last October.

ROAST CHICKEN

The housewives are happy. Farmers are turning to thoughts of roast chicken, despite predictions from some quarters that egg prices will soar by summer.

The new federal program replaces the old promise-to-purchase support under which the government agreed to buy all grade A large eggs when the market price dropped below the support price.

NO AGREEMENT

The new plan has no purchase agreement. The price of eggs finds its own level and farmers get only the market price at the time. At the end of the year, the government pays a deficiency payment in cash to farmers on a maximum of 4,000 dozen grade A large eggs if the average annual price falls below what the government calls a "prescribed" price. The "prescribed" price is the same figure as the old support—the 10-year average price. However, under the new plan, a national average is used which comes to 35 cents.

New RCMP Building Two Years Away?

Property has been bought for a new provincial RCMP headquarters in Victoria, but an RCMP spokesman said yesterday it may be as long as two years before a move is made.

Foster Parents To Meet

A meeting of foster parents will be held by the Family and Children's Service at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Spencerhouse, 1951 Cook.

Feature of the meeting will be a panel discussion on the relationship between the foster parent, the social worker and the foster child.

Panel members will include Miss Constance Holmes, a member of the board of directors of the service, Mr. and Mrs. John Petersen, foster parents, and Mrs. Mary McKenzie, a social worker.

The Family and Children's Service now has 296 children, exclusive of those on adoption probation, under the care of 150 foster parents in Victoria.

Big U.S. Firms Charged Again

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Twelve electrical equipment manufacturers including the two largest, General Electric and Westinghouse, were indicted by federal grand jury Wednesday on anti-trust charges of price fixing.

Tuesday the grand jury indicted five firms — General Electric and Westinghouse among them — for conspiring to fix prices and rig bids on the sale of heavy electrical equipment.

The property, at the foot of Barnard Avenue, off Esquimalt Road, has been purchased by the federal government from Mr. and Mrs. James Eccles, formerly of Victoria. A disused old people's home which now occupies the site will be torn down to make way for the new project.

No official figures have been released as to the cost of the new building, but spokesmen said it will be about $1,000,000. The building will house both the provincial command and the Victoria detachment, which now occupies the old Windermere Hotel on Courtney Street.

"The old building on the property won't be torn down until we get word from Ottawa," an RCMP official said. "But the move must be considered to be in the remote future. It could even be as long as two years."

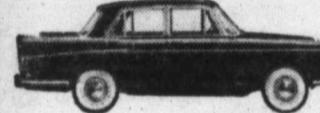

The property is on the Victoria Harbor waterfront, and the detachment's patrol boats would be docked in front of it instead of in Esquimalt Harbor as at present.

Capital Punishment Debate

backed by four Conservatives, two Liberals and two CCF members. Five Conservatives and two Liberals were lined up against abolition.

Both the Commons and the public galleries were unusually crowded when McGee opened the debate. In short order, however, it was just another day as far as attendance was concerned.

The House was startled last night when Erhard Rieger (CCF, Burnaby-Coquitlam) said that if the Commons rejected the bill, the 265 members and 102 senators should take the responsibility of "yanking the rope" in public hangings on the lawns of Parliament Hill at tulip time.

PROVE DETERRENT

McGee said the decisive point must be whether the death penalty provided a deterrent to potential murderers.

The underlying fact is that the existence or non-existence of capital punishment has no relation in any logical or proven way to the number of murders committed," McGee said. "The really effective deterrent is the certainty of apprehension and conviction."

McGee was strongly supported by seconder veteran abolitionist Harold Winch (CCF-Vancouver East) who said capital punishment was "inhuman, out of date and should be outlawed." He disclosed that he had received five threatening letters about the bill.

After 25 years of studying the subject, Winch said the facts disproved theories that the death penalty was approved by the Bible, that it was not a deterrent and that it did not give protection to police forces.

Conservative J. Ferguson Browne (PC-Vancouver-Kingsway), however, spoke out against the bill and was applauded when he said he completely rejected the arguments of Winch and McGee. He suggested instead of abolition, a more humane method of execution and said that the majority of Canadians did not want the death penalty removed.

Liberal Hubert Badami (Fort William) supported the bill and said that the federal government's commutation of 32 of 40 convicted murderers "has gone a long way to abolish the death penalty." A greater deterrent would be a 99-year prison sentence, he said.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of abolition was given by prominent criminal lawyer Arthur Malone (PC, Parkdale), who said society was "morally entitled but not morally obligated to exact the life of a murderer." He said the death penalty unduly influenced the verdicts of juries and often prompted the reduction of a murder verdict to manslaughter.

The grandnephew of Confederation Father Darcy

McGee quoted a variety of statistics to prove the irrelevance of the death penalty to the commission of murder.

The six U.S. states that had abolished capital punishment had a 1958 murder rate of 1,838 per 100,000 population, he said. In the remaining 42 states of the day, the rate was 7,04 per 100,000, he said.

In New Zealand, which had swung back and forth between hanging and abolition, the rate was 6.7 murders per 100,000 during abolition and 8.7 when the death penalty was restored, he said.

ALL EYES ON ROPE

"Public hangings were supposed to provide the ultimate deterrent," he added. "Yet when pickpockets were being publicly hanged in England, it was at the very moment when all eyes were on the rope that pickpockets made hay among the audience."

The ineffectiveness of the death penalty was the main of seven arguments put forth by McGee in favor of abolition.

Among the others were that capital punishment was "morally wrong," based on the unchristian principle of revenge and retribution, raised a risk of error, and produced "unequal results for almost identical acts."

"Capital punishment, in fact, has an adverse effect on justice," he said, "by making juries reluctant to bring in a verdict they know will produce a hanging."

Chessman Reprieved

court rejected Chessman's latest plea.

The grim procedure of readying Chessman for death at 11 a.m. MST today swung into action.

His shoes and belt were removed and his clothing changed to guard against possible suicide. His last dinner was ordered—fried chicken. Chessman signed his will.

In Washington, President Eisenhower received telegrams, some from Brazil, asking him to intervene to save Chessman. James Hagerty, Eisenhower's press secretary, said the president could not intercede officially.

"This is a matter entirely for the State of California," Hagerty explained.

STEELED HIMSELF

Chessman steeled himself for the ordeal. He vowed to "die with dignity."

Chessman was adjudged guilty of kidnapping with bodily harm because two young women were forced out of parked cars and compelled to perform perverse sex acts. The victims and their escorts also were robbed.

He was convicted of a total of 17 charges including robbery and attempted rape.

San Quentin guards began preparations for the execution Wednesday by checking the green-painted gas chamber to be sure it is airtight. They often goes without break-made another check Thursday.

The prison warden completed plans for removing Chessman from death row—where he has written three published books and framed his own court papers—to a cell next to the chamber.

Chessman busied himself at his typewriter with farewell letters to friends and planned during the day to sign a new will.

INNOCENT

Chessman, as the hour drew near, steadfastly held himself innocent of the crimes:

"I'm innocent and I'll say it in hell, if necessary," he said.

On what was likely his last full day alive, Chessman arranged for disposition of his few possessions.

He offered his more than 15 books, mostly law books, to the prison library. The prison accepted.

Chessman gave three boxes of personal property to Miss Asher along with a last letter to Brown.

Two prison guards were assigned to an all-night suicide watch outside Chessman's cell.

The prison made known what will be his last meal—a breakfast of orange juice, bacon and eggs and coffee. But Chessman might pass it up.

The prison was to be informed of his last meal.

Chessman was to be given a final meal.

The magistrate noted that the emergency vehicle had complied with regulations requiring that its siren be sounding and its red light flashing, and that while going through the intersection it had reduced speed to below the speed limit.

But, the magistrate said, he could not find that Smith drove as charged—without reasonable consideration for other persons.

A suspended sentence under $250 bond for six months was handed down to James Parham, 1012 North Park, after he pleaded guilty to assaulting Pearl Parham, his chairman of the joint chiefs of staff.

An air force manual made public Wednesday stirred a storm of protest by linking some U.S. churches with communism and questioning the public's right to know certain information.

Rep. Frank Kowalski, a former army colonel, who earlier made public an air force manual on how GIs could be efficient orderlies for officers, said the manual on officers' clubs was "ridiculous."

Other instructions in the mess book tell how to keep records for slot machines, stage a "bunny hug" dance, and mix martinis or other cocktails.

The manual states that if getting dates for bachelor officers is a problem, "call the nurses, women's colleges or the Junior League."

Admitted Relations With Child

Cleric Wore Black Jacket and Cap

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 37-year-old minister used a false name and wore a black jacket and motorcycle cap to date a 12-year-old girl, police court was told Thursday as the minister admitted sexual relations with the girl.

Rev. Gordon Sears, father of three and leader of the Youth for Christ Movement here, pleaded guilty to the charge and was remanded for eight days for a pre-sentence report.

Magistrate Oscar Orr said he wants to see either the girl or a photograph of her.

Prosecutor Stewart McMoran said there was an indication the girl is pregnant, but between $400 and $500 each week to keep the Youth for Christ Movement going.

"This is the only reason I can give for him seeking this type of release."

Canadians Add Color

Canada's delegation to the Winter Olympics marches onto the speed skating oval at Squaw Valley, Calif., Thursday in colorful opening cere-mories. The Canadian team drew great applause from the crowd of 6,500 for their uniforms which were blanket cloth jackets and fur caps.

Winter Olympiad Begins

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (CP) — The problem-plagued eighth Winter Olympics opened Thursday during a lull in a 10-inch snowstorm.

Vice-president Richard Nixon drove the last 46 miles of his 3,000-mile journey from Washington over treacherous mountain roads to pronounce these 15 words:

"I now declare open the Olympic Games of Squaw Valley celebrating the eighth Winter Olympics."

Moments earlier the storm had let up and the sun broke out.

Some 6,500 spectators, gay in brilliant-hued ski suits, huddled in the $3,500,000 arena to watch the parade of 740 athletes from 30 countries.

REAL HOLLYWOOD

There were almost as many participants as spectators. In addition to the athletes and Olympic officials, Hollywood's Walt Disney brought together a choir of 2,615 voices and 1,235 instrumentalists from 32 California and Nevada high schools for the brilliant cere-

The storm that snarled traffic also forced postponement of the men's downhill race from Friday until Monday to give time to pack the course. Thus competition will start today with the figure-skating pair's championship, the 30-kilometre (18 miles, 100 yards) cross-country ski race, and the first round of the hockey tournament.

GOOD START

Canada's 1960 try for the gold medals gets off to a promising start on the first day of competition with the experienced Toronto duo of Bob Paul and Barbara Wagner favored to add the Olympic crown to their world North American and Canadian titles in the figure-skating pairs.

The Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen clash with Sweden tonight in the opening hockey round, with the Canadians favored. In the day's other event, the cross-country ski competition, the Servold brothers from Camrose, Alta., are entered, but are not expected to place highly against the experienced European competitors. Irvin Servold drew No. 22 starting position with Clarence Servold due to start off 35th.

COLORFUL SHOWING

The Canadian Olympic team made a colorful showing in the parade of international athletes that opened the 11-day spectacle. They wore dark cossack hats and rainbow-hued mackinaws of white with large green, red, yellow and black stripes.

The setting was brilliant. The arena has an open end that looks out on a sheer mountain wall. Rose has been hung from the roof to keep the sun from melting the ice—one of the points about which athletes and officials have complained bitterly.

Mrs. Andrea Mead Lawrence, a former United States Olympic champion, skied down Little Pappo Mountain with the Olympic torch, bare-headed and not even carrying a ski pole, plumes of snow flying back from her skis.

DAY AND NIGHT

She handed the flame to fellow American Ken Henry, who skated around the rink and mounted the platform of the Tower of Nations and touched off the great Olympic flame. This will burn day and night until the games close Sunday, Feb. 28.

The crowd warmed up slowly as the athletes paraded in. Canada, Japan, Russia, and the U.S. team, bringing up the rear at host country, drew the repeat applause.

Carol Heiss, the pretty world figure-skating champion from Ozark Park, N. Y., took the Olympic oath on behalf of all the athletes.

She pledged:

"In the name of all com-

Californians Not Prepared

SQUAW VALLEY, Calif. (AP) — Twenty-eight spectators needed first aid Thursday as the Winter Olympic Games officially opened.

Nineteen were treated for exposure. Apparently many from the warmer sections of California found the 27-degree weather too chilly, or came with inadequate clothing.

petitors I swear that we will take part in these Olympic games respecting and abiding by the rules which govern them in the true spirit of sportsmanship, for the glory of sport and honor of our country."

At the climax of the ceremonies, 30,000 balloons soared aloft into the bright sunshine. Earlier, 2,000 pigeons, "doves of peace," had fluttered up the mountainsides. Artillery salvos also flew from the peaks.

get a chance to do something about them in games against the Cougars Friday and Monday.

Both clubs showed a complete form reversal from Tuesday night's game, in which an alert Cougar club came out with the long end of a 3-1 score.

CLOSE CHECKING

The Islanders, missing their peppy rightwinger, Arnie Schmaultz, who was injured Tuesday, were a bit lethargic and couldn't overcome the close-checking tactics of the Warriors. At that, Winnipeg goaliekeeper Al Rollins had to be good, particularly in the last 10 minutes, to keep the Cougars out.

Warriors, on the other hand, were skating well and checking in determined fashion as they kept glimmering playoff hopes alive.

Cougars scored first, Art Jones getting his 27th goal as he slapped in a loose puck from close range early in the first period.

OWN NET

Defenceman Jack Blonda then whacked the puck into his own net to pull Warriors even and give Ray Brunel credit for his 20th goal.

Red Johansen converted Paul Masnick's rebound at 1:43 of the second period and George Ford, picking up the puck behind the Winnipeg defence, got things all square again 52 seconds later.

That set the stage for the booming shots by Gerry Brinson, late in the second period, and rookie defenceman Ted Green, at 6:25 of the third, which won it for Winnipeg.

MONTREAL (UPI)—Norm Ullman's power play goal with one second left to play earned the Detroit Red Wings a 3-3 tie with the Montreal Canadiens Thursday night.

clinched an uphill struggle after spotting the fading Wings a 2-0 first period lead.

Gary Aldcorn and John McKenzie gave the Wings an early 2-0 margin but the Canadiens evened it with second period scores by H. Richard and Ralph Backstrom, their two little speedsters. Then Phil Goyette, their third-line centre, hammered home a 15-footer to the near side at 13:58 after Riggan had made fine stops on Bernie Geoffron and Claude Provost.

Garden Notes

Bulbs Will Fill Gaps

By M. V. CHESNUT, FRHS

If you plant up your garden this spring with some of the sure-fire perennials mentioned in yesterday's column, I don't want you to expect a grand display the first summer. Herbaceous perennials are long-lived plants, but by the same token, most of them are slow starters. The odd plant may throw a bloom or two this summer, and probably all of them will produce flowers next year, but it will be the summer of 1962 before your perennial border starts looking like the pictures in the catalogues.

For providing some immediate color in the permanent border, I don't think you could do better than to interplant your perennial roots with clumps of summer-flowering bulbs. Later-on, when the herbaceous plants start to spread out and fill up the intervening places, the bulbs can be shifted elsewhere.

One glamorous bulb for this purpose is the Tigridia, sometimes known as the Mexican Shell Flower. These are flamboyant blooms that look for all the world like a great tropical butterfly poised for flight. The colors are mostly vivid shades of red, orange and yellow polka-dotted in black or brown, with an occasional lovely flower in pure white.

The bulbs are not expensive, running around 75 cents per dozen, considerably less by the hundred. Each individual flower lasts only a single day, but the plants are prolific of buds, and the blooms keep coming for weeks on end. These are warm-weather plants, requiring plenty of sun, and shouldn't be planted until the maple trees have leafed out fully.

Several years ago I tried a small order of Sparaxis bulbs, sometimes known as the South African Harlequin Flower, and my family fell in love immediately with their colorful blooms. Standing about 16 inches tall, the flowers come in a bewildering array of shades, ranging from orange to pink to purple. Like Freesias, the Sparaxis blooms normally in winter, under glass, but the bulbs sold at this season of the year have been specially treated to bring them into bloom in midsummer. The bulbs run around 60 cents per dozen.

My wife, who has become just a little bit "teched" with the flower-arranging bug, insists that we double or treble our planting of Persian Buttercups this year. The strain we grow is Ranunculus grandiflora, the peony-flowered buttercup, with flowers much bigger than the run-of-the-mill kinds. These are long-stemmed, very free-flowering, coming in all colors of the rainbow, and are out of this world in bowls and vases. The cost is about 65 cents per dozen or $4.50 per 100, and you must remember to plant them with the "claws" down about two inches deep and eight inches apart.

A bulb which deserves to be planted much more widely is Zephyranthes, an airy, delicate-looking bloom which wears the poetic name, Flower of the West Wind. The foliage is grass-like, and the dainty, funnel-shaped solitary blooms come in white, yellow, pink, red and bronze. Plant two inches apart with the tips of the bulbs just barely covered with soil, and in full sun.

The bulbs are a bit more expensive than the others I have mentioned, running around 20 cents each or $2.50 per dozen. One particularly rare and beautiful variety, Zephyranthes brachyandrus, may set you back as much as one dollar per bulb.

The Viewing World

TV's Direction Disturbing

Bob Stevens was one of the first young directors around television. As director and producer, he launched "Suspense." He used to produce and direct Arthur Godfrey's "Talent Scouts." He directed Theatre Guild shows, "Climax," and many of the Hitchcock shows, and most recently he directed Audie Murphy in "The Man" on Ford Starline.

That made him a logical man to talk about the direction television is taking, about which he's seriously disturbed. "I think television is in serious trouble because of the tastes which are being dictated to the people by big organizations," he said. "The big organizations decide what kind of programs they want and then they jam them down the people's throats."

"I'm not anti-big business," says Stevens dryly. "But they control the artistic world we live in and they shouldn't. The artist has the choice of getting out and doing a movie or a play—or of doing something on television he might, once in a very great while."

The independent, arrogant man of the '60s is gone. The bank clerk doesn't become president of the bank because there are too many questions to fill out asking too many questions.

Hollywood Today

Gina's Son Shockproof

HOLLYWOOD (NANA) — Gina Lollobrigida, who usually has a lawsuit or two on hand, has filed 10 suits for libel against Italian newspapers for stating, she says, that she ordered cuts in the "orgiastic dance" in "Solomon and Sheba," so that her son would not be embarrassed by it. "In the first place," says Gina, "I have no rights over the picture. And in the second place, my son, who is 2½ years old, never sees movies."

France's Nuyen's removal from the film of "The World of Suzie Wong" means that William Holden and the rest of the expensive cast must return to Hong Kong for four weeks of re-shooting. No wonder producers—and bankers backing movies—get ulcers. Not overlooking poor, sick Miss Nuyen.

By the way, Peter Graves, younger brother of Jim "Gunsuke" Arness, is stuck in Sydney, Australia, with a new TV film series, because the backers were aghast at the sky-high cost and pulled out.

These TV series have pitfalls. For instance, Maxwell Reed—Joan Collins' ex-mate—is suing Guild Productions for $40,000 in claimed unpaid salary.

Lauren Bacall is an excellent comedienne in "Goodbye Charlie" on the New York stage—surprisingly good, in fact. However, the George Axelrod play reminds me of a car that lets off a lot of rumbles and sparks, but doesn't quite start.

The Living Commonwealth

Youthful Ghana Leads the Way

ACCRA, Ghana (Reuters)—Less than four years after its birth as an independent state, Ghana is bidding fair to assume the leadership of the surge toward national identity sweeping Black Africa.

His hopes are pinned to the concept of a Union of African States, a federated structure linking independent Negro nations ruled by Negroes.

This year or next, Nkrumah plans to call an all-African conference of political parties to formulate a common policy, a common method of approach and a common understanding of the gigantic struggle for political and economic independence facing the continent.

But first Ghana must be made strong at home, and Nkrumah's solution to this problem is simple: "Work, work, work."

On the economic front, the economy—cocoa.

Industry, trade, electric power, communications are to be expanded and educational facilities, housing, health, sanitation and water-supplies improved.

In addition, there are plans to give Ghana television and a powerful $700,000 international broadcasting service.

Preliminary work has started on a project vital to Ghana's future industrialization: the Volta River project.

This $300,000,000 project is to build a dam and power plant on the Volta River to produce hydro-electric power for use in large-scale production of aluminum from the rich bauxite deposits in the area, and also to feed power to an electricity-hungry nation.

As their leaders have said, in this period of transition, Ghanians cannot hope for a miraculous transformation from poverty to wealth.

Husband Reports Crime

Wife Hacked to Death For 'Backseat Driving'

ST. PETERSBURG (UPI)—An air force master sergeant who became enraged at his wife's "backseat driving" beat her to death with hatchet blows over the head, police reported today.

M. Sgt. Olin Beverly, 49, of nearby MacDill Air Force base, was held for investigation of murder in the death of his wife, Suzanne Cecile Beverly, 45, formerly of Montreal.

Detective Cliff Frye said Mrs. Beverly was killed by multiple hatchet blows over the head which fractured her skull.

He said that Beverly, originally from Floral City, Fla., admitted he assaulted his wife with the hatchet after she had infuriated him with her nagging about his driving.

Frye quoted Beverly as saying Mrs. Beverly complained about the way he handled his car on the way home from a party at the MacDill non-commissioned officers club last night.

Frye quoted the sergeant as saying that upon arriving home he went to the kitchen of their $18,000 home, picked up the hatchet and began beating his wife. Beverly reported for duty this morning, but returned after a few hours and reported the crime to MacDill base police by telephone. They notified local police.

Refugees

Dirty Kids'
From Camps
Described

To children born and raised in refugee camps, people in houses are a race apart like super-beings from another planet, Peter Casson said last night.

Speaking to a public meeting to promote interest in World Refugee Year, Mr. Casson said there are 130,000 refugees in Europe who have lived in what amounts to concentration camps since the end of the Second World War.

NEW GENERATION

"There is a new generation of children being raised in these camps," he said, "and the conditions under which they live are such that even the children who live in the worst slums of Europe call them 'those dirty kids from the camps.'"

Hungarian refugees were welcomed in other countries, and rightly so, he said, but they were taken in quickly because their situation was dramatic and newsworthy. As such it was brought to the attention of the public.

"But people forgot the war refugees who had been waiting and praying for 15 years in the refugee camps for just such a break as the Hungarian refugees got in a few months," he said.

World refugee year ends in June.

Gaglardi
Preaches
Sermon

Highways Minister Gaglardi, a Pentecostal Assemblies pastor, gave the legislature a sermon Thursday and declared the churches are the bulwark of the nation.

He got on the subject of churches by telling of a trip to Czechoslovakia where churches were shown as "tourist attractions."

Then he boomed out amid applause from all sides of the House: "I'm proud that I'm a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ."

This he said was his answer to those who make disparaging remarks about his connection with his church at Kamloops. "Do we appreciate the privileges and prerogatives we have in B.C. and in Canada today?" he asked.

Within Two Years

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Two more ferries will be needed on the government's Swartz Bay - Tsawwassen ferry service before too long. Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi predicted in the legislature yesterday.

"Within two years' time we will have to seek new traffic ways," he said.

MOST POPULAR

"We believe this ferry system will be the most popular ferry system in the entire nation. The entire Vancouver Island will become a mecca for tourists from the United States and from other parts of Canada," he said.

The new service, using the first two ferries, is expected to go in operation about May 31.

LATE 1960

The highways minister said the Trans-Canada Highway in British Columbia will be completed by late 1960 or early in 1961.

He said it was therefore important that British Columbia now start negotiating with Ottawa for a 50 per cent aid plan for all arterial highways through this province.

He said he fully expected a new agreement with Ottawa and that it will not be restricted to two-lane highways, but to whatever number of lanes are necessary both in highway and bridge construction.

60-MILE PRINCIPLE

He said he hoped the entire province would accept at least a 60-mile-an-hour principle for provincial highways.

He did not, however, object to slow drivers. "There are lots of slow drivers. We post a maximum speed limit so they can drive slow... and we are building four-lane highways so they can pull off to slow lanes if they wish."

HALF ACCIDENTS

He said speed only contributed to less than half the accidents to which liquor is attributed.

"I would say it would be better if the province never made a nickel from liquor profits. But we are a democracy... I am not going to foist my own ideas," he said.

He quoted a law enforcement official as saying "50, 60 and 75 miles an hour maximum speed zones have nothing to do with highway accidents in general."

SAFE SPEED

He said on B.C. highways, 60 is a good safe speed, if the driver is "capable of thinking without getting in a muddle."

Mr. Gaglardi said the B.C. Trans-Canada Highway will be the most scenic highway in the world—a thing of majestic grandeur of beauty which will be one of the most travelled in the world... a bright jewel scintillating in the crown of the provinces and which people will enjoy for a great many years."

50-50 BASIS

He said the new provincial aid for arterial highways in municipalities with a population over 15,000 will be on a 50-50 basis for mutually selected arterial roads. Some $500,000 has been placed in the budget for this purpose and cities to benefit are Victoria, Vancouver, New Westminster and North Vancouver.

Plans for a new radiotherapy unit and cancer clinic have been approved by the B.C. atomic energy commission at Cancer Foundation and by the atomic energy commission at Chalk River. Proposed installation of a new cobalt unit view, he added.

$2,500,000 Addition

Jubilee Tenders
Expected in Fall

Contract for construction of a $2,500,000 addition to Royal Jubilee Hospital is expected to go to tender in the early fall, a hospital spokesman said yesterday.

Construction of the 190-bed wing will be the final phase of a major renovation and enlargement program which has already seen construction of a new parking lot and interior quarters, and installation of a large new boiler.

Plans for a new radiotherapy unit and cancer clinic have been approved by the B.C. atomic energy commission at Cancer Foundation and by the atomic energy commission at Chalk River. Proposed installation of a new cobalt unit view, he added.

made the latter approval necessary. Hospital administrator George Masters said that sketch plans for an addition to the main kitchen and alterations to the existing kitchens have been approved by the provincial government and that architects are now preparing working drawings.

He pointed out that construction of the new wing cannot start until the kitchen addition is completed because the addition will be the only means of access between some parts of the hospital.

A detailed pre-construction budget has been prepared for the B.C. Hospital Insurance Service and is now under re-

Saskatchewan president Dr. J. W. T. Spinks said here last night.

He arrived in Victoria yesterday to attend and address a Saskatchewan University alumni dinner last night at the Pacific Club.

DUPLICATION

He told the Colonist that when more than one independent university exists within a single province there is wasteful duplication of effort and competition for both funds and staff.

His presidency of the University of Saskatchewan extends over the main campus at Saskatoon and a satellite at Regina.

SINGLE NAME

Both institutions are lumped under the single name University of Saskatchewan, but will eventually become known as the U. of S. at Saskatoon and the U. of S. at Regina.

While he declined to comment on what the respective units 550) increases, it would be conceivable that a new department might be inaugurated there which did not exist at Saskatoon.

On the subject of such satellite units as the one at Regina, he said that when a university reaches a certain size it has to duplicate anyway and it might just as well do it at a different location.

Burned Man

'Poor'

A 76-year-old newcomer to Victoria from Regina was still in poor condition at St. Joseph's Hospital yesterday, suffering from burns to his chest.

Speaker Says

Need for Expansion In Voluntary Field

"Voluntary agencies have been leaders in social welfare in the past," said Professor W. G. Dixon, head of the School of Social Work, UBC.

of the Provincial Council of Women, yesterday.

"Today, there is a feeling that enough has already been accomplished."

"But," he added, "there is still a great need for voluntary effort in new fields of research such as that of emotional illness, delinquency and crime. Voluntary agencies must be imaginative in expanding their influence."

"Awareness of up to date happenings is necessary in all voluntary effort," said Mr. Dixon. "The public is often overwhelmed and unable to sort out the advantages of some government services."

NOT UNDERSTOOD

Police administration, which is an important instrument in social control is something that is not understood by the average citizen, he said.

"It is odd" said Mr. Dixon, "that there has been no banding together of citizens to foster experimental ideas in education."

"Traditional role of voluntary effort is to deal with unmet needs. This is a challenge that appeals to the pioneer spirit."

Mr. Dixon pointed out that it is necessary at this time to scrutinize existing social services and where possible coordinate them. "This would be a kind of 'social audit,'" he stated.

"It is important" said Mr. Dixon, "to keep the voluntary spirit alive by giving scope to discussion of public affairs and to have a closer involvement of voluntary agencies and local government."

"There should be more joint exploration of problems by voluntary and public bodies."

A panel discussion by Dr. T. Wyller, Dr. Coofie Verner, Mr. Gordon Selman and Mrs. G. W. Kissick followed.

Your Problems

By Ann Landers

Dear Ann: This is old stuff to you but it means my whole life. I'm hopelessly in love with my boss and he loves me.

The man I married 15 years ago is quiet, stupid and boring. We have two children. I've always worked and made as much money as my husband.

My boss's wife is a social snob who fills her life with parties, visits to the massage parlor and high sounding charity drives. She doesn't know anything about her husband's business, cares less and they have nothing to talk about except their children's poor report cards.

He wants to marry me but is afraid of the scandal. I know we could be exquisitely happy together. My marriage is dead and so is his. Why shouldn't we have a life together? — KITTY.

Dear Kitty—If you'd get off the boss's lap long enough to have a good talk with your husband, he might offer few suggestions on how to bring some life back into that gasping marriage.

The boss looks good because you see him at his best. Maybe if you had to listen to him snore, pick up his socks and shorts and put up with his relatives he'd present a different picture.

You say you and your husband have nothing in common. What more can people have in common than children?

I suggest that you get out of that office and out of his life. If you expended some of that energy at home and treated your husband just half as nice as you treat the Boss, you might find him a lot less boring than you think.

Why Do They Get Mad?

Dear Ann: Why do people ask for an honest opinion then get mad when you give it?

Just yesterday a good friend who is a widow asked what I thought of the man she's going with. I told the truth. He is homely, uncouth, dresses in atrocious taste and is below her mentally and socially.

The minute I finished she started to defend him and said indignantly, "If that's the way you feel, you and your husband had better not come to my dinner party next week because he'll be there."

Another friend asked my opinion of the girl she was dating. The girl has a poor reputation and comes from a cruddy family. I told her so. Three months later the boy married her and I was not invited to the wedding. Does it pay to be honest? — NO LIAR.

Dear No: Some people are ruthless and destructive when asked for an "honest opinion." They mask cutting remarks with what they call "truth" and think this makes the crudest comments ginger-peachy.

The next time you're asked for a frank opinion, say something nice. Every person has at least one good thing to recommend him.

Dear Ann: A recent column dealt with unorderly merchandise sent to a reader in an attempt to raise money for a "worthy charity."

Better Business Bureaus throughout the country have printed reams of information on this subject. They advise the public not to use the merchandise but not to return it. This discourages the operators. If the victim is dunned for money he should advise the company that they will be sent a bill for storage. The way to destroy these rackets is by educating the

ORIENTAL FLAVOR

Brilliant jewel and spice tones in leathers introduce an Oriental flavor. Turned-up toes and open wamps carry through the exotic effect. When unexpected guests drop by, bright color in a quickly donned mule in colorful, butter-soft sheep leathers dresses up the occasion. Vibrant blues, burnished gold, deep purple and berry red glamorize an otherwise simple costume.

To make an evening at home an event, city dwellers and suburbanites alike slip into a mid-heel thonged sandal or a high heel mule that emphasizes a slim ankle below velvet or corduroy slacks.

Tips for Parents

Two Sides to Story Of Irresponsibility

By HELEN R. HEWSON

There are usually two sides to the story of parents' problems with undependable children. Is too much being demanded of them?

"These are the things I think she should be able to do around the house, but she is a most irresponsible child and I have to keep at her constantly or she would accomplish nothing," the parent stated.

Mother took a typewritten sheet from her purse and laid it on the desk. The teacher picked it up.

"Hm, quite a formidable list for a 10-year-old. I doubt if I could carry out all those details without being reminded. Tell me, who prepared this list?" asked the teacher.

"Why, I did, of course."

At a Home and School meeting, Mary Ellen's mother had complained to the teacher of her daughter's thoughtless and irresponsible behavior.

The teacher was surprised. "Why, Mary Ellen is wonderfully helpful and co-operative at school."

"I'll drop in some day to learn your secret," her mother had promised, and here she was.

Dilys Bennett Laing Dies

A former, well known Victorian, Dilys Bennett Laing, died at her home in Hanover, New Hampshire on Feb. 14.

Born in Wales, she came to Canada as a child and lived in Victoria during the 20s. During this time she was a member of The Daily Colonist staff.

Mrs. Laing went to Seattle in 1930 and met her author husband, Alexander Laing, there.

After their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Laing moved to New England where Mr. Laing teaches at Dartmouth College.

Mrs. Laing is known chiefly for her poetry. She had two books of poems, "Another England" and "Birth is Farewell" published. A novel, "The Great Year" was also published and she was a regular contributor to many magazines.

Surviving are her husband, son, David, her mother, Mrs. A. J. Bennett, Vermont, and her brother, John Bennett, Shelton, Wash.

Coffee Party On March 25

Mrs. R. S. Olson, 3555 Beach Drive, will lend her home for the Spring Coffee Party given annually by the Ladies' Auxiliary to the YMCA.

This event is the main money raising project of the auxiliary during the year. The affair is to be held March 25, with Mrs. F. E. Waring as general convener and Mrs. A. B. McFarlane, co-convener.

Mrs. George Gregory is convener of the homecooking with Mrs. T. L. McMasters and Mrs. J. Dickie assisting. Mrs. Clyde Savage and Mrs. J. Johnson are social conveners and Mrs. B. Buffam and Mrs. R. McNeely will look after delicatessen.

At the February meeting at which Mrs. G. H. Wheaton presided, it was reported a net profit of $321 was realized from a gift aisle in the YMCA.

It was stated that five members of the auxiliary are now serving on the YWCA board "Showing how closely knit the YMCA and YWCA are becoming."

BAPTIST MISSIONARIES

Penny Sale Project

Main fund raising project of the Aldyen Hamber IODE last year, was the annual penny sale, held jointly with the Navy League Chapter. Aldyen Hamber's share of the profits amounted to nearly $388.

Rummage sale netted proceeds of $34 and $30 was raised from a bake sale.

Reports of last year's activities were given at the annual dinner and meeting held Wednesday evening, in the James Bay Hotel.

Total receipts of the year amounted to $644 and disbursements were $767.

Over $153 was spent on services at home and abroad. Two elderly citizens were given hampers during the year and other needy families at Christmas. Toys were donated and given to needy children.

Several members take active part in the work of the Cerebral Palsy Association and a donation of $100 was given to it by the chapter.

A total of $252 was spent on education last year. A teacher Training Bursary of $50 was awarded to Miss Betty Ann Hamilton of Cumberland, a student at summer school, and $55 was given to Secondary Education.

Officers elected for the new year are Mrs. M. Kendall, regent; Mrs. E. Pittieley, and Mrs. J. A. Dunn, vice-regents; Mrs. H. W. Norman, secretary; Mrs. J. H. Daigle, treasurer; Mrs. C. Medley, education secretary; Miss M. MacNeill, echoes secretary; Mrs. J. S. White, services at home and abroad, and Mrs. M.

Campbell and Mrs. P. F. Battin, councillors.

Mrs. G. Harris, Mrs. J. A. Dunn and Mrs. N. S. Lockyer will head committees.

What's Cooking!

Ancients Prized Lowly Vegetable

By LOUISE MOORE
An onion—if you hold your nose—is just as sweet as any rose and as every good cook knows many of our most enjoyable dishes would be a total failure were it not for this lowly vegetable.

The onion, a member of the lily family, is an ancient vegetable, prized and eaten by laborers who built the Great Pyramid in Egypt. Not only does it add zest and flavor to stews, casseroles, etc., but as Robert Louis Stevenson wrote, an onion is "the poet soul of the capacious salad bowl."

STUFFED ONIONS ITALIAN STYLE

Boil 6 large onions that weigh $\frac{1}{2}$ pound each in 1 inch of boiling salted water for 5 minutes uncovered. Then cover and boil another 5 minutes. Drain well. Cool.

Remove 5 layers from centre of onion and chop and saute in 1 tbsp. butter 3 minutes or until tender. Add $\frac{1}{2}$ pound ground lean beef or pork or veal and cook until the red disappears.

Soak 3 slices bread in $\frac{1}{2}$ cup water and squeeze dry. Crumble into the meat and stir in 1 tbsp. finely chopped parsley, $\frac{1}{2}$ tsp. salt, $\frac{1}{4}$ tsp. pepper and 2 lightly beaten egg yolks—use whites for making meringues or apple snow.

Stuff mixture into onions and place in buttered baking dish. Sprinkle with buttered crumbs and grated cheese and

A delicious flavor complement for broiled or poached fish is this chervil butter sauce, easily prepared from ready-to-use ingredients on your spice shelf. For six servings, add one-half teaspoon pre-grated lemon peel and four teaspoons chervil to one-half cup melted butter. Grand with scallops, lobster, clams or other seafood.

bake in mod. oven (375 degrees) 1 hour or until tender. Serves 6 for a thrifty main dish.

GLAZED ONIONS
Choose small white onions and cook in boiling salted water just until tender—no longer. Drain. For 16 small onions—enough to serve 4—put 4 tbsp. butter or margarine in sauce pan and add 2 tbsp. granulated sugar.

Add onions and cook over low heat postling the onions often to glaze on all sides to a rich golden brown. These are delicious with a roast of pork or veal and good with duck.

SIDING

"Keystone" clear kiln dried siding is the finest available—a quality material for all applications where perfection is required.

With its "grow-in" workability, weather resistance and lasting good looks, "Keystone" clear Western Red Cedar Siding has long been recognized as the standard of quality home construction.

It has a distinctive "shadow line" which enhances any architectural style in any setting, and is used to create a variety of interesting decorative effects on indoor surfaces as well as exterior.

5 GRADES

"CLEAR" Bevel SIDING

Siding of this grade is designed for use where perfection is demanded. It is well milled on face and edges, making a smooth surface, uniform in length without waste & width, sides & vertical grain (VG) for the width or more from thick edge.

"A" Bevel SIDING

Siding of this grade is selected for use where exceptionally fine appearance is desired. It is well milled on face and edges, making a smooth surface, uniform in length without waste & width, sides & vertical grain (VG) for the width or more from thick edge.

"B"

Bevel SIDING

Appearance closely approaching that of the higher grades is often achieved by this grade which contains slightly more characteristics than some of the lower pieces. Cross grain of even moderate skill find it easy to moderate. It may be mixed grain (MG).

"C"

Bevel SIDING

Pieces of this grade have one or more characteristics which are such size or number that they are not suitable for the "A" grade. Lengths are random with no specified percentage.

At Least Two Die in Flaming Head-On Train Crash

POMQUET, N.S. (CP) — Rescue workers reached two bodies in the charred cab of a diesel locomotive Thursday night more than five hours after a fiery head-on collision between two CNR freight

trains in this eastern Nova Scotia community.

The body of a third member of the engine crew of one train was still missing. Three men in the locomotive of the second train suffered minor injuries and burns. Their condition was described as satisfactory in hospital at Antigonish, 12 miles from here.

The CNR identified the victims as Albert MacIvor, the engineer; Laird Smith, brake-

man; and Clarence Lowe, fireman, all of Stellarton, N.S.

Wrecking trains were on their way from Halifax and Sydney but the line was expected to be blocked until sometime today.

About 20 cars were derailed. Each train was pulled by two locomotives. The leading engines on each train caught fire shortly after the crash.

The victims were in the cab of the locomotive pulling an eastbound freight when it collided with a westbound train on a single-track section near the station here. The collision was followed by a blast when the fuel tanks of one of the locomotives exploded.

Blazing fuel oil splattered

around the scene from the four diesels involved, kept firemen away from the wreckage for nearly five hours. For a time there was fear that a loaded wine car, which jumped onto the roof of one of the engines, would blow up.

Last-Minute 60-Day-Stay For Chessman

CARYL CHESSMAN
... orders last meal

BULLETIN

Caryl Chessman was granted a 60-day stay of execution early today, just 10 hours before he was scheduled to die in the gas chamber.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A last-gasp move to save the life of Caryl Chessman failed Thursday, but the convict-author fought on even as he was prepared for execution this morning in San Quentin.

Just before he was taken to the waiting cell next to the green-painted gas chamber late Thursday afternoon, Chessman typed out a 2½-page letter to Governor Edmund Brown and handed it to his lawyer, Rosalie Asher.

30-DAY REPRIEVE

It asked for a thirty-day reprieve "so that he can disclose certain facts that are going to prove his innocence," Miss Asher told reporters at the prison. She refused to elaborate. It was Chessman's first direct appeal for any kind of clemency.

She telephoned the gist of the letter to Brown's clemency secretary, Cecil Poole, who agreed to receive the letter and present it to Brown.

However, Miss Asher was later denied permission to see Gov. Brown. The governor's press secretary said she presented "nothing that requires that she see the governor."

Chessman finally resorted to personal appeal to the governor after the state supreme court, for the second straight day, voted 4 to 3 against clemency and sealed shut the door by saying, "This order is final forthwith."

That stamped it as possibly the last chapter in a 12-year court fight that drew worldwide attention.

In Sacramento, Governor Edmund Brown said "No further action on my part is possible" after the state supreme court had rejected his first direct appeal for any kind of clemency.

First Stages Queen Resting Fitfully

LONDON (CP) — The Queen was reported to be resting fitfully today in the first stages of an apparently difficult childbirth.

Her gynaecological surgeon, Dr. John Peel, who spent the night at Buckingham Palace, remained near at hand.

Court officials were reported to have been advised that the royal baby could be born at any moment.

When the birth appears imminent, apparently later today, the Queen's two other doctors and her anaesthetist will be summoned.

Brokerage Firm Made $17,000,000 Profit

NEW YORK (AP) — Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner and Smith Inc., the world's biggest brokerage house, yesterday reported profit and gross income record for the year ended Dec. 25 came to $17,102,000, or $5.02 a share.

The company said that since the 1958 profit of $6,131,000 was figured on a partnership basis, it was not "strictly comparable" to last year's total. Merrill Lynch became a corporation Jan. 12, 1959. Shares are held by 158 stockholders.

Gross income climbed to $136,080,000 from $102,966,000.

The theft took place between 8:40 and 9 p.m. Janitor Frank

About five youths were in the corridor looking at the

It was in session upstairs.

Police thought the group

Gordon Perkins, a news

backed by four Conservatives, two Liberals and two CCF members. Five Conservatives and two Liberals were lined up against abolition.

Both the Commons and the public galleries were unusually crowded when McGee opened the debate. In short order, however, it was just another day as far as attendance was concerned.

The House was startled last night when Erhard Rieger (CCF, Burnaby-Coquitlam) said that if the Commons rejected the bill, the 265 members and 102 senators should take the responsibility of "yanking the rope" in public hangings on the lawns of Parliament Hill at tulip time.

PROVE DETERRENT

McGee said the decisive point must be whether the death penalty provided a deterrent to potential murderers.

"The underlying fact is that the existence or non-existence of capital punishment has no relation in any logical or proven way to the number of murders committed," McGee said. "The really effective deterrent is the certainty of apprehension and conviction."

McGee was strongly supported by seconder veteran abolitionist Harold V. Lorraine (CCF-Vancouver East) who said capital punishment was "inhuman, out of date and should be outlawed." He disclosed that he had received five threatening letters about the bill.

After 25 years of studying the subject, Winch said the facts disproved theories that the death penalty was approved by the Bible, that it was not a deterrent and that it did not give protection to police forces.

Conservative J. Ferguson Browne (PC-Vancouver-Kingsway), however, spoke out against the bill and was applauded when he said he completely rejected the arguments of Winch and McGee.

In New Zealand, which had swung back and forth between hanging and abolition, the rate was 6.7 murders per 100,000 during abolition and 8.7 when the death penalty was restored, he said.

ALL EYES ON ROPE

"Public hangings were supposed to provide the ultimate deterrent," he added. "Yet when pickpockets were being publicly hanged in England, it was at the very moment when all eyes were on the rope that pickpockets made hay among the audience."

The ineffectiveness of the death penalty was the main of seven arguments put forth by McGee in favor of abolition.

One of the strongest arguments in favor of abolition was given by prominent criminal lawyer Arthur Malone (PC, Parkdale), who said society was "morally entitled but not morally obligated to exact the life of a murderer." He said the death penalty unduly influenced the verdicts of juries and often prompted the reduction of a murder verdict to manslaughter.

The grandnephew of Confederation Father D'Arcy McGee said the decisive point must be whether the death penalty provided a deterrent to potential murderers.

"The underlying fact is that the existence or non-existence of capital punishment has no relation in any logical or proven way to the number of murders committed," McGee said. "The really effective deterrent is the certainty of apprehension and conviction."

Chessman to Die

court rejected Chessman's latest plea.

The grim procedure of readying Chessman for death at 11 a.m. MST today swung into action.

His shoes and belt were removed and his clothing changed to guard against possible suicide. His last dinner was ordered—fried chicken. Chessman signed his will.

In Washington, President Eisenhower received telegrams, some from Brazil, asking him to intervene to save Chessman.

James Hagerty, Eisenhower's press secretary, said the president could not intercede officially.

"This is a matter entirely for the State of California," Hagerty explained.

Chessman steeled himself for the ordeal. He vowed to "die with dignity."

Chessman was adjudged guilty of kidnapping because two young women were forced out of parked cars and compelled to perform perverse sex acts. The victims and their escorts also were robbed.

He was convicted of a total of 17 charges including robbery and attempted rape.

San Quentin guards began preparations for the execution Wednesday by checking the green-painted gas chamber to be sure it is airtight. They may be sunbathing weather again today.—(Colonist photo.)

He often goes without breakfast. He has written three published books and framed his own court papers—to a cell next to the chamber.

Chessman bussed himself at his typewriter with farewell letters to friends and planned during the day to sign a new will.

INNOCENT

Chessman, as the hour drew near, steadfastly held himself innocent of the crimes:

"I'm innocent and I'll say it in hell, if necessary," he said.

On what was likely his last full day alive, Chessman arranged for disposition of his few possessions.

He offered his more than 15 books, mostly law books, to the prison library. The prison accepted.

Chessman gave three boxes of personal property to Mrs. Asher along with a last letter to Brown.

Two prison guards were assigned to an all-night suicide watch outside Chessman's cell.

The prison made known what will be his last meal—a breakfast of orange juice, bacon and eggs and coffee. But Chessman might pass it up.

"There is not enough home life today. There are too many parents working part-time. You can't raise children and be away. We are lucky enough to have a real home life. Father didn't chastise us much, but when he spoke we did as we were told," says Miss Evans.

Ignored

John Evans' wife has been mistakenly ignored by writers, says Miss Evans.

A mere five-feet tall, she did as much for Cowichan as her husband. "She brought many infants into the world, looked after the sick and laid out the dead. She even made coffins."

"If any woman did as much today as mother did, she would expire. Mother baked on an open fire (there were no stoves then), washed on a board, made all our clothes with a needle and churning 100 pounds of butter a week," says Miss Evans.

"I don't know how she did it. She just never stopped, except on Sundays when we had visitors."

But times and the people have changed.

Duncan was likable until about 30 years ago. It has grown too large. People are not as friendly. They talk of community spirit—and publicize it—but few people are willing to give their time.

"People want more given to them, they aren't as independent. Now they can get unemployment insurance. They expect something for nothing."

No Ambition

Father agreed that if we weren't careful we would be taking away people's ambition to do anything for themselves.

"Neither I nor my sister could have taken what my mother did. Sure, we were sort of pioneers and walked to school, and had it tougher than the present generation, but the real pioneers had it very rough; so rough it is almost unbelievable."

"When mother was young

she crossed the plains in a covered wagon in 1861. They were followed all the way by Indians, although they didn't attack. Several times the wagon party came on settlements and ranches where everyone had been killed, and mother always was scared of Indians.

Scared

Father married her in California and brought her here. They bought a 160-acre pre-emption on Cowichan Lake Road, about three miles out. They were away from the settlement and mother was so scared of all the Indians around that she convinced dad he should take her back to California, and he did, for a while."

Mr. and Mrs. Evans helped to leave a solid heritage, part of which is a record unattained by any other small district in the province.

When the province was in its infancy, Cowichan was three premiers. They were William Smythe, Alexander Davie (grandfather of Justice Minister Davie Fulton) and his brother, Theodore Davie.

Police Oversight Saves Driver from Jail Term

NANAIMO—William Arthur Trampour of Port Alberni was fined $200 but saved a jail sentence yesterday by an RCMP oversight.

Officers forgot to serve a notice on Trampour before he pleaded to an impaired driving charge. Trampour had a conviction for a previous similar offence and if the notice had been served, he faced a mandatory jail term.

Library Tax Hike Can't Cover Needs

NANAIMO—Mrs. Marion Ricker, school board representative on the Nanaimo Regional Library Board, said that a five-cent per capita tax increase for library purposes had been insufficient.

She said that the library board was able to budget only $12,000 for books in its $130,000 budget.

Mrs. Ricker also complained that there was not enough money available to replace professional librarians.

A campaign for a new library building sparked comment from several school trustees.

J. W. Mannion hoped that people in the rural areas would contribute to the drive for $25,000. Mrs. Ricker announced that "library users" were first being approached by canvassers.

Council Approves Share In Home Nurse Service

NORTH COWICHAN—Council has approved spending $800 as its share of home nursing service to be operated by the Central Vancouver Island Health Unit.

Before the service can start it must be approved by councils at Duncan and Lake Cowichan.

After finding the four councillors in favor, Reeve Donald Morton said, "I can't see us raising the mill rate, but I can't see it being reduced."

Dr. C. J. G. Mackenzie, head of the island health unit, wrote that it will mean the municipality's 30 cents per capita payment to the unit will be raised 10 cents for each person.

In his letter the doctor stated it would mean an increase in staff and part-time help during weekends and emergencies.

So far it is expected 17 teams will be in action this year, ranging from Little League to senior ball.

Meeting is at 8 p.m. in the community centre.

DUNCAN—Victoria car salesman Sydney Bentley's explanation that he was speeding because he was not used to driving a large car, won him a minimum fine in court yesterday.

He pleaded guilty to a charge of speeding on the Malahat near Mill Bay recently. Acting police magistrate George Hall fined him $15.

School Bus For Parents

NANAIMO—Parents will be taken to school by regular school bus next month.

This is one of the national education week features in Nanaimo.

Reservations can be made by phoning the school board office before Feb. 25.

Meeting Set For Baseball

CHEMAGINUS—A meeting will be held in Chemainus Wednesday to organize baseball in Cowichan.

So far it is expected 17 teams will be in action this year, ranging from Little League to senior ball.

Meeting is at 8 p.m. in the community centre.

'Grand Old Man' Is 93

PARKSVILLE — Many messages of congratulation and good wishes were received by Rev. G. Arthur Bagshaw, grand old man of Parksville, who was 93 years of age on Valentine's Day.

Still Hale and hearty, Mr. Bagshaw came to Canada 67 years ago as a student minister. He assisted in the building of St. Anne's Anglican Church at French Creek in 1894.

Later, Mr. Bagshaw spent some time in the Yukon, then other parts of British Columbia before returning to Vancouver Island in 1927. He was vicar of St. Anne's Church for several years from 1935 and has resided in Parksville since that time.

Also "John Brown's Body," a one-act play directed by John Atkinson.

NANAIMO — Nanaimo school board still wants to see a regional dental consultant employed at the central Island health unit to replace Dr. Percy Arkle, who resigned.

The health department in Victoria refused to replace Dr. Arkle and Health Minister Eric Martin has told the school board he was too busy as acting premier to discuss the matter further.

Trustee J. W. Mannion wants the board to approach Dr. Martin "when he isn't so busy."

The board learned Wednesday night that a local dentist who did part-time work for children within School District 63 also would discontinue this practice in June.

Bus drivers, engineers and janitors of large schools will receive about $15 more a month. More than 20 employees are involved.

Within Two Years

By ALEC MERRIMAN

Two more ferries will be needed on the government's Swartz Bay-Tsawwassen ferry service before too long, Highways Minister P. A. Gaglardi predicted in the legislature yesterday.

"Within two years' time we will have to seek new traffic ways," he said.

MOST POPULAR

"We believe this ferry system will be the most popular ferry system in the entire nation. The entire Vancouver Island will become a mecca for tourists from the United States and from other parts of Canada," he said.

The new service, using the first two ferries, is expected to go into operation about May 31.

LATE 1960

The highways minister said the Trans-Canada Highway in British Columbia will be completed by late 1960 or early in 1961.

He said it was therefore important that British Columbia now start negotiating with Ottawa for a 50 per cent aid plan for all arterial highways through this province.

He said he fully expected a new agreement with Ottawa and that it will not be restricted to two-lane highways, but to whatever number of lanes are necessary both in highway and bridge construction.

60-MILE PRINCIPLE

He said he hoped the entire province would accept at least a 60-mile-an-hour principle for provincial highways.

He did not, however, object to slow drivers. "There are lots of slow drivers. We post a maximum speed limit so they can drive slow... and we are building four-lane highways so they can pull off to slow lanes if they wish."

HALF ACCIDENTS

He said speed only contributed to less than half the accidents to which liquor is attributed.

"I would say it would be better if the province never made a nickel from liquor profits. But we are a democracy... I am not going to foist my own ideas," he said.

He quoted a law enforcement official as saying "50, 60 and 75 miles an hour maximum speed zones have nothing to do with highway accidents in general."

SAFE SPEED

He said on B.C. highways, 60 is a good safe speed, if the driver is "capable of thinking without getting in a muddle."

Mr. Gaglardi said the B.C. Trans-Canada Highway will be the most scenic highway in the world—a thing of majestic grandeur of beauty which will be one of the most travelled in the world... a bright jewel scintillating in the crown of the province and which people will enjoy for a great many years."

50-50 BASIS

He said the new provincial aid for arterial highways in municipalities with a population over 15,000 will be on a 50-50 basis for mutually selected arterial roads. Some $500,000 has been placed in the budget for this purpose and cities to benefit are Victoria, Vancouver and North Vancouver.

Several Universities

Wasteful Duplication

A multiplicity of independent universities within a single province is uneconomic and inefficient, University of Saskatchewan president Dr. J. W. T. Spinks said here last night.

He arrived in Victoria yesterday to attend and address a Saskatchewan University alumni dinner last night at the Pacific Club.

DUPPLICATION

He told the Colonist that when more than one independent university exists within a single province there is wasteful duplication of effort and competition for both funds and staff.

His presidency of the University of Saskatchewan extends over the main campus at Saskatoon and a satellite college at Regina.

SINGLE NAME

Both institutions are lumped under the single name University of Saskatchewan, but will eventually become known as the U. of S. at Saskatoon and the U. S. at Regina.

While he declined to comment on what the respective fates of the University of British Columbia and Victoria University should be under somewhat similar circumstances, he pointed out that Regina College need not be academically subordinate to the larger unit at Saskatoon.

A detailed pre-construction budget has been prepared for the B.C. Hospital Insurance Chalk River. Proposed installation of a new cobalt unit view, he added.

In the future, he said, when the Regina unit (present on rolment 550) increases, it would be conceivable that a new department might be inaugurated there which did not exist at Saskatoon.

On the subject of such satellite units as the one at Regina, he said that when a university reaches a certain size it has to duplicate anyway and it might just as well do it at a different location.

At Least Two Die in Flaming Head-On Train Crash

POMQUET, N.S. (CP) — Rescue workers reached two bodies in the charred cab of a diesel locomotive Thursday night more than five hours after a fiery head-on collision between two CNR freight

trains in this eastern Nova Scotia community.

The body of a third member of the engine crew of one train was still missing. Three men in the locomotive of the second train suffered minor injuries and burns. Their condition was described as satisfactory in hospital at Antigonish, 12 miles from here.

The CNR identified the victims as Albert MacIvor, the engineer; Laird Smith, brake-

man; and Clarence Lowe, fireman, all of Stellarton, N.S.

Wrecking trains were on their way from Halifax and Sydney but the line was expected to be blocked until sometime today.

About 20 cars were derailed. Each train was pulled by two locomotives. The leading engines on each train caught fire shortly after the crash.

The victims were in the cab of the locomotive pulling an eastbound freight when it collided with a westbound train on a single-track section near the station here. The collision was followed by a blast when the fuel tanks of one of the locomotives exploded.

Blazing fuel oil, splattered

around the scene from the four diesels involved, kept firemen away from the wreckage for nearly five hours. For a time there was fear that a loaded wine car, which jumped onto the roof of one of the engines, would blow up.

Last-Minute 60-Day-Stay For Chessman

CARYL CHESSMAN
... orders last meal

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — Governor Edmund Brown today reprieved convict author Caryl Chessman for 60 days and turned the whole matter of capital punishment over to the state legislature.

The governor said he also was fearful of hostile demonstrations toward President Eisenhower on his forthcoming trip to South America.

Brown said he gave Chessman a reprieve because "I want to give the people of California an opportunity, through the legislature, to express themselves on capital punishment."

He said he would put the matter on special call to the legislature when it reconvenes in March.

Che斯曼 had been scheduled to die in the gas chamber at 10 a.m. today.

At San Quentin prison, the condemned man was led Thursday from his cell on death row, the one he has occupied 11½ years, to the "waiting cell" 13 steps from the gas chamber.

Before his reprieve, he had ordered what was supposed to have been his last meal—fried chicken and French fried potatoes.

Warden Dickson visited the prisoner after a day of hectic developments in which one of Chessman's lawyers, Rosalie Asher of San Rafael, had personally delivered a letter from Chessman to the governor's hand.

Warden Dickson was asked by reporters if he had spent more time than usual with Chessman on what was to have been his last night.

"Yes," the warden replied. "Guess I have. You see Chessman has been here so long, I've sort of got to know him."

The warden declined to say whether he was fond of the prisoner. He did say, however, "Chessman has some traits that must be admired."

Before the dramatic reversal this morning it had seemed certain that Chessman would die later today.

In Sacramento, Governor Edmund Brown said "No further action on my part is possible" after the state supreme court officials were reported to have been advised that the royal baby could be born at any moment.

When the birth appears imminent, apparently later today, the Queen's two other doctors and her anaesthetist will be summoned.

500-Pound Bust Carted Away

Pranksters capped a week of controversy over a bust of Queen Elizabeth last night by stealing the seven-foot, 500-pound bust from the main corridor of city hall.

Police said the theft was obviously the work of a group of pranksters and that in all probability it would be found at some well-known spot in the city today. They immediately began checking the Victoria University campus, and there was some speculation that the bust might turn up at tonight's university Co-Ed dance.

"It's hard to believe," he said when the reporter managed to convince him.

Given Place of Honor

"It wouldn't have been so bad if they had taken the one of Captain Foster," he blurted out.

He was referring to a bust of the late Capt. Norman Foster, founder and director of the Victoria Girls' Drill Team for many years, whose bust, also executed by Mrs. Packard, was given a place of honor at city hall in 1958 just a few months before his death.

Sculptress Peggy Walton Packard received word of the theft of her creation with a brave but weak chuckle, and the breathless statement, "I'm

Payment for Bust

She said she was to have gone to city hall to get a $300 cheque in payment for the bust, but at the last moment she had received word from Acting Mayor Millard Mooney that the cheque would be mailed to her.

The acting mayor confirmed that the cheque was already in the mail.

He said he didn't know whether the city's insurance policies would cover the loss.

Word of the theft first came to city radio announcer Bill Pike, who was phoned by one of the pranksters. Mr. Pike was summoned.

The theft took place between 8:40 and 9 p.m. Janitor Frank Townsend cleaned around the bust at 8:40, then went for lunch. "When I came back it was gone, and there were five pennies left in the place where it stood," he said.

Main doors of city hall were locked, but a side door was open to allow people to attend a meeting upstairs.

About five youths were in the corridor looking at the bust about 8:30. One of them asked the caretaker where the meeting of the Victoria Gladious Society was being held.

It was in session upstairs. Police thought the group was likely responsible for the theft, since it took five men to carry the bust into city hall when it was placed there three weeks ago.

Gordon Perkins, a news dealer across the street from city hall, reported that a youth came in about 8:30 and exchanged a dime for 10 pennies.

The bust had been a centre of controversy almost since city council commissioned Mrs. Packard to create it last June for a fee of $350.

When it was completed, arguments boiled up over where it should be placed, and because a bust was not immediately submitted, payment was not made and a "Pennies for Peggy" fund was initiated to raise money to pay the sculptress.

Ironically enough, the bust was stolen just a few hours after city officials had mailed Mrs. Packard a cheque for full payment.

Marilyn Ardley, president of the Victoria University student council, declined to comment last night on speculation that it was a student prank.
